

Arriving to Zagreb and getting around

By plane

Zagreb International Airport (<http://www.zagreb-airport.hr/home>), is located 17 km south-east from the city center in the district of Pleso.

There is a bus link between the main airport (Zračna luka) and the main bus station (Autobusni kolodvor) in Zagreb. A single (one-way) ticket costs 30 kuna (~ 4,2 Euro) and from the main bus station in downtown Zagreb, you can then connect to the city trams. The ride from the airport to the main bus station takes around 25 minutes via bus. The bus leaves the airport at 7AM and every thirty minutes between 8AM and 8PM. Between the last regular bus at 8PM and the first one at 7AM the next morning, there is a bus leaving for the bus station every time a Croatia Airlines plane lands.

The bus line between the bus station and the airport is slightly more complicated. Full details are available in English from <http://www.plesoprijevoz.hr/en>. The buses are located at the edge (facing city center) of the bus station. You'll see "croatia airlines" and "eurolines" written on that part of the building.

By train

Glavni kolodvor - Zagreb's Main Railway Station

Zagreb Central Station (Glavni kolodvor) is a railway hub which has direct services to major neighboring European cities as well as domestic services to all major towns (except Dubrovnik).

By bus

The central bus station (Autobusni Kolodvor) is located to the south-east of the railway station - approximately 10 minutes walk, or 3 stops by tram (lines 2 and 6). Timetable information and prices can be found on the AKZ website <http://www.akz.hr/default.aspx?id=260>.

Getting around Zagreb

Zagreb has a well-developed and efficient public transport system that consists of trams, buses and trains. The tram network operates 24 hours a day - from 4AM to 12AM there are 15 "day-time lines" (tram lines 1-9, 11-15 and 17), and from 12AM to 4AM there are 4 "night" lines (tram lines 31-34) which cover most of the day-time lines on a reduced (around 30-40 minute) frequency. Occasionally, buses replace trams on night lines. Tram line 3 does not operate Saturdays, Sundays and on public holidays. There are maps of the tram lines on almost every stop, so if you know the nearest stop to your destination you can simply figure out the shortest trip while you're at the stop.

As for the buses, there are 113 day-time and 4 night lines. ZET buses cover the area outside the city center, as well as some neighboring towns that administratively belong to Zagreb county. The buses use the same ticketing system as the trams.

The price of a single one-zone ticket valid for 1.5 hours is 10 Kunas when bought from a newspaper stand, ZET ticket or from the tram or bus driver. The ticket used during night schedule costs 15 Kunas (~2€). It can only be paid in local currency (Kuna or HRK). Buy a ticket and punch it (insert it) in the little orange machine once you enter to validate. All single tickets are transfer tickets valid in multiple vehicles traveling in a single direction, so you won't need a new ticket when switching trams and/or buses. Tariff zone system exists, but only for townships and communities outside of Zagreb city limits, all trams are in zone 1, as well as buses in the City of Zagreb. If you plan on taking more than two rides, buy a daily ticket. Riding without a validated ticket is not advisable, due to a recent increase in the number of active ticket controllers.
